themselves with a book, taking a sly peep out of the window now and then to see what was going on. The sweeps meantime came after their sack and wondered how it could have burst. However, they fied it up and swept up the mess and retired. while Mr. Bedington and the victim of Jack's latest joke were in the garden.

Turning to the gardener, Mr. Crawcour said: "Hold me tight. Don't let him come near me. I shall do him a mischief if he does. He has dared to kick me from his doors-me, the principal of Pomona House."

"What does he say, Ford?" inquired Mr. Bedington.

"He says he's a gentleman and his name's Crawcour, sir, and if he gets at you he'll kill you for kicking of him," replied the gardener. "Can it be possible? Why, yes; the features are the features of Mr. Crawcour, but the complexion"-

"Is the result of this diabolical outrage, sirl" interrupted Mr. Crawcour. "My wife is not here. It was all a trick. I fell over a rope and pitched into the soot, which was prepared for

"Not with my knowledge. I hope you will acquit me of blame. Come to my dressing room. You shall have a warm bath, and I can lend you some things to put on. What a strange occurrence! It must have been Jack's doings."

"Not a doubt of it, my dear sir," replied Mr. Crawcour. "I know him of old. He's always up to his tricks."

They walked toward the house, and when they had passed the window Jack popped his head out and exclaimed: "Hello, boys! There goes another

Mr. Bedington looked in at the drawng room door and sald in a stern voice: Jack, I want you upstairs in my dressng room presently. Bring up the sherry, will you? It is in the chiffonier." "All right," answered Jack,

In about ten minutes Mr. Crawcour emerged from the bath clean and comfortable, and he was just putting on some clothes the valet had laid out for him when Jack and his father came in. "We have brought you some wine," said Mr. Bedington.

"Ah, wine-sherry-very good!" said the schoolmaster, smacking his lips.

"Jack says he knows nothing about it," continued the boy's father. "It's very odd. The careless fellows must have laid their sack down thoughtlessly, and you had the misfortune to fall into it. However, try a glass of wine."

The principal smiled and took a brimming wineglass tendered him by Jack and gazed fondly at it as he said: "Life is a ship tossed upon a stormy ocean. You, my young friend-you are like a young bear who has all his troubles to come. Your health, Mr. Bed-

He drank the wine off at a gulp and turned pale. Then he drew a long face and put his hand upon the region of his stomach.

"Dear me! What a peculiar taste! Acrid is the word for it. I should have said it was vinegar if I had not had your assurance to the contrary."

Mr. Bedington took up the glass and smelled it. It was vinegar

"Can I have made a mistake?" said Jack in a tone of apology. "Yes, in my hurry I must have taken up the vinegar bottle instead of that which contained sherry. I ask the gentleman's pardon, I'm sure."

"Go away!" cried his father angrily. "Get out of my sight or upon my word I shall be tempted to box your ears."

"Oh, oh," ejaculated Mr. Crawcour, twisting about in pain, "the vinegar gripeth me! Truly it is pungent liquid. I feel as if I was being tied in a double knot. Verily, I am griped! Oh, oh!" Jack disappeared in a trice, and Mr Bedington handed the schoolmaster a pocket flask of brandy, which he sipped, much to his internal comfort.

At length they descended to the drawing room, and Mr. Crawcour had recovered his screnity.

"Playful boy, come and shake hands with your old friend," exclaimed the principal. Jack did so.

"Glad to see you, sir," he said,

"That's right and manly. Now I am going to talk to you. Let bygones be bygones, only admitting that if I erred on the side of severity with you there was much that was aggravating in your conduct to me. Would you or would you not like to come back to your old school? Your father has, wisely perhaps, left the choice in your own hands."

"I should have thought you would not like the worry of me, sir," said

"That is nothing," answered Mr. Crawcour. "If a good man wishes to straighten a crooked sapling, he minds not the labor required."

"So I am a crooked sapling, am I?" thought Jack. "I wonder what he'll call me next.'

"Now, my dear boy, believe me to be your sincere friend." "That's like the end of a letter," Jack interrupted. "I know what you want to say, sir-will I come back to you or not?" "Yes." "Well, to just show you that I am not afraid of you and that you have not conquered me, I will come back, and you shall see me among the earliest arrivals at Pomona House when the holidays are up."

Mr. Crawcour got up and, throwing his arms round him, embraced him. "The best boy I have, sir-the best and the most promising boy in the school," he exclaimed in delight.

"Draw it mild," muttered Jack, "Well," said Mr. Bedington, "Jack has made his choice, and I am satisfled. That's over, and now you must take a little refreshment before you go, Mr. Crawcour. What is there, Jack? You generally know the state of the larder."

LIGHTSOILS

Vi list to use for a

FERTILIZER

A great deal is said about the treatment of run-down farms. Lands in Vermont are too cheap in most sections to make it pay to reclaim run-down farms by the use of expensive commercial fertilizers, especially where the soil is light and sandy.

There is abundant evidence to justify the assertion that Salt used on dry, light, exhausted lands will draw to the earth the moisture in the atmosphere, thus keeping the roots of the plants in a healthy, growing condition: whereas without the use of Salt they dry up and the crop if oftentimes worth but little more than the expense of harvesting. It is not true, we think, that Salt can be profitably used on wet, heavy or clay soils.

The location of Page's Hide Heuse in Northern Vermont gives farmers of that section an advantage possessed by few localities, for, when cash accompanies order, he sells Fertilizing Salt at $3.50 per ton, which is only a little more than half the price at which ordinary salt can be afforded. We find from a multitude of testimonials received that an Oat Corp on worn out light soils, is more than doubled by the application of salt, and we especially commend our Salt to farmers who wish to raise this crop.

Mr. G. W. Lovejoy of Hardwick, Vt., one of the successful farmers of that town, tells his experience in the following language:

"I put 800 pounds of Page's Fertilizing Salt on two acres that the year before cut less than 300 pounds of hay, and sowed to peas and oats and raised ten one-horse loads. I put 1200 pounds on three acres that had been plowed and cropped about ten years and on that I had a heavy crop of oats and this year I put on 1200 pounds more. I used $5.00 worth of salt this year and got a crop of oats worth $50.00 It pays to buy Fertilizing Salt."

Farmers should send in their orders early, addressing them to

MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL

INVESTMENTS This is what the Cream Separator has proved to be. Twenty years of experience upon the part of hun dreds of thousands of users in every country of the world bear witness of the fact. No one disputes it. There was never a better time to make this allimportant farm investment than the present. Butter is unprecedentedly high in price. It is most desirable to produce all possible of it, that none go to waste and that the quality be such as to command top prices. As between separators, DE LAVAL supremacy is universally conceded. DE LAVAL machines are actually cheapest, of equivalent capacities, while they gain and save twice as much as the best of imitating machines and last four times as long.

If you have cream to separate you cannot afford to delay this investment a single day. If you haven't the ready cash the machine will earn its cost while you are paying for it.
